WE'RE FOR AMERICA & AMERICANS!

The reports of Commerce and Navigation, corrected to January, 1897, is found a table giving the exports and imports of merchandise from 1835 to 1897 inclusive. An examination of this report, says The American Economist, shows that under Protection the exports of this country have nearly always been greater than the imports, while during periods of low Tariff, the imports are nearly always greater than the exports.

During the seven years from 1835 to 1842, under a low Tariff, the excess of our exports over our exports was $113,755,467, while during the four years from 1842 to 1846 under Protection, the excess of our exports over imports was $47,336,375. The low Tariff established in 1846 continued until 1857 when it was made still lower until 1862, at which time the Morrill Tariff was adopted. During that period of 16 years our imports were $445,913,376 in excess of our exports.

From 1862 to 1873, a period of 11 years, during which the great Civil War took place, creating an enormous demand for both home and foreign manufactured products, the excess of our imports over our exports was $1,086,440,587; but from 1873 to 1886 the excess of our exports over imports has been $2,289,062,105. During the whole periods from 1835 to 1896 our excess of exports has amounted to $2,451,020,105; of this amount $2,355,093,442 has been received since 1873. During the same period, from 1835 to 1896, our total excess of imports has been $1,709,892,908; of this sum there has been only $40,468,612 since 1873. During the period from 1883 to 1893, mostly under low Tariffs and the pressure of the Civil War, our imports were $1,598,803,055 in excess of our exports, while from 1873 to 1896, mostly under Protection, our exports have been $2,289,062,337 in excess of our imports.

These facts ought to sufficient to show the people of this country how much more we prosper under Protection than under Free-trade.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates a diseased condition of the kidneys. When a stain is left it is positive evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Klimer's Special Remedy for Kidney Disease fulfills every wish in relief given in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Klimer's Remedy is well known.

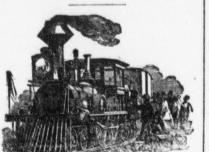

It stands the highest in the list of wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have this best. Sold by druggists: price $1.00. Send a small quantity in a bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail, mention THE PUBLIC LEDGER and send your postoffice address to Dr. Klimer & Co., Binghamton, N.Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

From St. Louis daily Pullman palace sleeping cars and every Thursday evening Pullman tourist sleeping cars to Los Angeles and other California points. The route is direct and on this way the excursions are modern and built specially for our California travel. The excursions are personally conducted and the cost of the trip is included in the price of the excursion. It is said that too many immigrants settle in our cities, thus dangerously increasing their idle and vicious population. This is a great evil, but in its magnitude it can not be shown, however, that it affects all our cities, nor that it is popular, nor does it appear that this condition, when it exists, demands as a remedy the removal of our present immigration policy.

The claim is also made that the influx of foreign laborers does the injury to our citizens, to whom, who are better entitled to them, than to the foreigner. Their living itself is daily a loss. An unfortunate condition is certainly presented when any who are willing to labor are unemployed. But far more serious is the condition now existing among our people. It must be conceded to the fact of phenomenal business depression and the stagnation of our enterprises in which there is a fact to the effect that the character of the whole financial and economic governmental policies and a consequent encouragement to the activity of capital, the importance unemphasized of labor, the indifference to great numbers of our people, must be remedied. If it continues, its natural consequences must be to check the further immigration to our cities of foreign laborers, and to deprive the ranks of those who are willing to work the moment those most willing and best entitled ought to be able to secure the advantages of such work as there is to do.

The educational test contained in the bill receives close attention on this particular point. Mr. Cleveland says, in his opinion, it is infinitely safer to admit a hundred thousand immigrants, though unable to read and write, seek among us only a home and opportunity to work, than to admit a few educated men, who, though not originally with illiterate laborers. They are rather the victims of the educated agitation. The ability to read and write is required in my opinion, a misleading test of contented industry and supplies unsatisfactory evidence of desirable citizenship or a proper appreciation of the benefits of our institutions.

CLEVELAND

Issues a Message Vetoing the Immigration Bill.

The First Section Excludes the Admission of Illiterate Persons.

This Message Says, is a Radical Departure From Our National Policy—It Is a Message of Good Willings, to the Educational Test.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—President Cleveland, in his message vetoing the immigration bill, calls attention to the first section of that measure excluding from admission to the United States illiterates. He states that in the section, and declares that the provision presents a radical departure from our national policy relating to immigration. "Hostile," he says, "we are to ourselves, welcomed to us, came to us from other lands, except whose moral or physical condition or history threatened danger to our security, safety and welfare. Relying upon the jealous watchfulness of our people to prevent injury to our political and social fabric, we have encouraged those coming from foreign countries to cast their lot with us, and join us in the development of our vast domain, securing in return a share in the blessings of American citizenship. A country's strength grows great largely due to the assimilation and theft of millions of sturdy and patriotic adopted citizens attest the success of this generous and free-handed policy, which, by giving the people interests exacting from immigrants only physical and moral soundness and a willingness and ability to work."

A contemplation of the grand result of this policy, "he writes, "can not fail to arouse a sentiment in its defense." Referring to the claim that the quality of recent immigration is undesirable, President Cleveland says the time is quite within recent memory when the same was said of immigrants who, with their descendants, are now numbered among our best assets.

It is said that too many immigrants settle in our cities, thus dangerously increasing their idle and vicious population. This is a great evil, but in its magnitude it can not be shown, however, that it affects all our cities, nor that it is popular, nor does it appear that this condition, when it exists, demands as a remedy the removal of our present immigration policy.

KENTUCKY NEWS.

The Latest News From All Parts of the Commonwealth.

MARCH 16.

The Date Set for the Extra Session of the Kentucky Legislature—St. John Boyle to Be Appointed Senator.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 16.—Gov. Bradbury has determined to issue his call for the extra session on Friday, and the blank date in the call has been filled in with the words "March 16." At the time the governor nominated an appointment of senator, St. John Boyle, is also to be made.

This was the programme. Tuesday night was given to a correspondent by the governor's secretary, seen only by Gov. Bradbury himself. The news committee, through Mr. Hanna, followed up the telegram of Saturday night with a letter giving at length reasons why it thinks an appointment unsafe, urging a special call of the legislature.

To this the governor has replied by mail, saying in substance that, knowing the time compunctions would render the legislature unable to do its duty, and the danger of no election, he is unwilling to run the risk of losing the senatorship to the republicans entirely, and therefore insists on making a temporary appointment.

The President-Elect Enters the National Capital.

No Military or Other Display on His Arrival, by Request.

The Crowd in Waiting Set Up a Cheer When McKinley's Wall-Knows Figure Appeared—The Party Was Then Enclosed to the Ebbitt House.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Wm. McKinley entered Washington Tuesday as a private citizen, and as quietly and unostentatiously as any private citizen could under similar circumstances. At the request of the president-elect, there was no military or other display on his arrival. He walked through the streets at the usual pace, an entering carriage awaiting him, was driven to the Ebbitt house, the hotel at which he made his home in Washington while a member of congress. That was the entire program of attention that he appeared in the capital city as the future president of the United States.

PRESIDENT-ELECT MCKINLEY.

It was just 11 o'clock when the Pennsylvania station exactly on time. Outside the station building an immense crowd had gathered.

The members of the local reception committee gathered early at the station. They were Charles J. Bell, chairman; W. J. LaFever, former ex-mayor of Washington; C. G. Glover, Myron M. Parker, national committee-man for the District of Columbia and ex-commissioner of the district; James L. North and J. C. Lowry, who accompanied the commissioners were J. Addison Porter, the coming secretary to President McKinley.

Just before the arrival of the McKinley train, the members of his staff, with the members of his state arrived at the station and were permitted to pass through the gates leading to the track platform. The staff officers were in full uniform and all dressed uniformly and presented a decided appearance as they lined up to salute the president-elect when he stepped from the train. Meanwhile the crowd outside the station increased.

It blocked Union Street for a few yards between the station and Pennsylvania avenue. Around the end of the station where the train entered the rear road the gathering held in check, a high fence and a squad of policemen. When the well-known figure of Maj. McKinley appeared on the platform the crowd set up a cheer. Maj. McKinley stepped off his seat in response, and then stepped to the platform to receive the greetings of the reception committee. Half a dozen policemen marched ahead of the train, and the president-elect's large party as it proceeded down the platform towards the ladies' entrance. Maj. and Mrs. McKinley were immediately preceded by Col. Edward M. Park, of the reception committee.

The procession proceeded very slowly and with dignity.

The task of getting the president-elect out of the train and into the waiting carriage was a moment only, and before the crowd knew it was rapidly disappearing up Pennsylvania avenue. With Maj. and Mrs. McKinley in their carriage came Col. J. Addison Porter and Mr. G. C. Glover, of the commission. The latter was the large party that accompanied Maj. McKinley to Washington took the other carriages.

No mounted escort was to be seen, but the crowds along the way recognized Maj. McKinley as his carriage proceeded, unattended, at a leisurely pace, and several times knots of spectators gathered to watch the gathering about the Ebbitt was greater than at the station. The carriage containing Maj. and Mrs. McKinley drove around the corner to the main door on the street. Chars were up from the crowd from the time the president-elect was sighted until he disappeared inside the hotel. Mr. Hanna was there waiting for him. The press corps and the members of the international committee were brief but hearty. He hurried Maj. and Mrs. McKinley through the lobby to an elevator, and quick for the press can tell it, the new president and his wife had disappeared from public view.

Soon after the arrival at the Ebbitt house, Maj. and Mrs. McKinley were figuratively showered by lists of white paste board but they received a few inflammatory friendly ones. Gen. Russell A. Alger, among the callers. Maj. McKinley was very much fatigued and retired to her room for a rest in preparation for the dinner at the white house to be held that night.

President Cleveland recovered from his rheumatic attack Tuesday evening sufficiently to assist Mrs. Cleveland in entertaining Mrs. McKinley and the president-elect's party. At the last, Mrs. McKinley was still so tired and fatigued to attend the dinner and her husband went alone. This was purely an informal and domestic affair as far as the others were bidden, and at 7:30 o'clock the three hours in which the interest of the entire United States is just now entered, sat down to a beautiful repast in the dining room of the executive mansion. The chancery has been given for what the Clevelandians have not been exemplified throughout the evening.

After the repast was over the two discussed what was assumed an interesting subject mentioned eight years ago, when President Cleveland completed his first term of office. Their conversation over their affairs, their wide field of grave state affairs which one will not unwillingly relinquish to the other on Thursday.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The special train bearing President-elect Hobart and party arrived at the Baltimore & Ohio station about 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. There were no special demonstrations attending Mr. Hobart's reception. They were received by the district receptionists.

The vice-presidential party included Hon. Garret A. Hobart, Mrs. Hobart, son John W. Griggs, governor, and Hon. Griggs' wife, Mrs. Hobart, adjutant-general, and Mrs. Stuyvesant and other members of the governor's staff, accompanied by the ladies of their families.

Washington, March 3.—The Senate special session opened at 1 p.m. Wednesday the house was still considering the senate amendments to the monetary conference bill and it now goes to the president for action.

A PAYMASTER ABSOLUTELY.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Paymaster John Corwin, U. S. N. S., presented his bill to the Senate, calling his bill a paymaster bill, and appropriating $67,444. The house amendments to the senate international monetary conference bill were passed without a division. The remainder of the session was occupied by the general debate on the bill, which was $6,000 more than was in the bill as passed the house. At 9:30 a.m. was taken a recess.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Several Measures Passed in the Senate—Lengthy Session of the House.

Washington, March 3.—Senate Bill passed for the prevention of the introduction and spread of contagious diseases in the United States, was passed, and appropriated $67,444. The house amendments to the senate international monetary conference bill were passed without a division. The remainder of the session was occupied by the general debate on the bill, which was $6,000 more than was in the bill as passed the house. At 9:30 a.m. was taken a recess.

HOUSE.—A concurrent resolution was passed authorizing the printing of 10,000 copies of the bill to prohibit the use of silver currency. A motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill as settled by senate or committee of the whole was carried against various states on account of deflated money. The bill was then voted down. It was defeated. Mr. Alderman Hobart endeavored to bring up the bill again, but was unsuccessful in his efforts. The bill contains a provision for the payment of debts in gold, and upon the consequent necessity of forgoing such mutual relations as would be involved in such a course. He alluded to the vanished glories of the Mediterranean nations, which were formerly the countries for the world's civilization, but which now possess only the name.

This object lesson was never plainer than at the present moment when the peace of Europe was in jeopardy through lack of those qualities of force and power forming the basis of his country's prosperity than that of his listeners. (Cheers.) He spoke of the presence of the illustrious statesmen who had proven his power and service in proportion in human action in affairs.

He referred to Lord Salisbury was loudly cheered.

Continuing, Mr. Hobart said he desired to call the names of those who were perfectly able to contradict him that there was not a question between the peoples of the United States and Great Britain that justified a war. He regretted that he was not more capable to voice what he felt. He believed he was chosen four years ago by a patriotic executive to portray what ought to be the relations of the United States and Great Britain.

Mr. Hobart dwelt at length upon the idealism of the Americans and Great Britain as the pioneers of human progress, based upon liberty and upon the consequent necessity of forgoing such mutual relations as would be involved in such a course.

Lord Salisbury then spoke. He referred to Mr. Hobart's term of office had ended. He referred to Mr. Hobart's term of office had ended. He referred to the American and British people being sored or perverted.

Lord Salisbury said that the danger did not lie in individual heads, but in the official people who had in order the official people would never make war.

At the present time the organized government had distinctly lost form and power, and gained power.

It was evident that public opinion should be rightly guided. It was in shaping the future that the advance of the world must be made.

In conclusion he asked his hearers to keep a corner of their hearts for him and then he bade them farewell.

Mr. Hobart was greatly cheered especially as he took his seat.
